"Young Mrs. Winthrop" the first half of the week, "Moths" the second half, and then—good-bye.

The fact that these two plays are intended as farewell performances will be a subject for sincere regret by the majority of Salt Lake's inhabitants, who will feel they can ill afford to spare a company who have contributed so much pleasure and amusement to them as have the stock company at the Grand opera house.

In offering "Young Mrs. Winthrop" to the public again, it speaks well for the success which aftended the first presentation of this comedy. Misses Bateman, Cooke (welcome back, Miss Cooke). Leigh and Kingsley will appear again oriental ballet by some of the nyme.

Leigh and Kingsley will appear again in their previous roles, as will also

We fear Mr. Clarke has bid an eternal farswell to the opera house stage, for Howard Kyle intends assuming the part of Buxton Scott this time, that was made so truststible a character had not laid such compelling claim uptop our admiration by his excellent character sketch of Jethro Baxter, the old farmer in "Caprice" we should g feel some dublous qualms as to his ability to fit into Mr. Clark's shoes.

Mr. Ward will attempt the part of Herbert, and we think it will suit him first rate.

The full cast of "Moths" is as follows: Victory Bateman, Vere Herbert:
Miss Cooke, Lady Dolly Vanderdecken;
Lisle Leigh, Jeanne de Sonnaez, Florduced by John Hare, is brilliant in dialogue and ingenious in construction.

The comic opera of "Priscilla," to be given in the Salt Lake theatre. May 5, 7 and 8, bids fair to be the most popular and successful home production since the performance of "Patinitza," some two or three years ago. The plot is the time honored one of the proxy courtship of Miles Standish, and the first puritan maidens engaged in a very pretty chorus and ends with John Alden's promise to woo and win the tretty Puritan. Priscilla, for Miles Standish. John Alden loves Priscilla, too, but, wrondly thinking, that his love is not returned, accepts the commission, arovided Miles Standish will noise abroad the sacrifice he makes, that John may pose as a marty.

The second act opens with Priscilla's spinning wheel song, in the chorus of which she is joined by Barbara. Faith and Prudence, three Puritan maidens, friends of Priscilla, John Alden makes his arrand known, and after faithfully pleading the suit of Miles Standish, is thunderstrick by her answer—"Why drn't you speak for yourself, John." Miles Standish is very engry at first, thinking a trick has been played on him, but wheel, he finds that Priscilla does not love him, but loves John Alden intead, he pardons them both, accepts Barbara for a wife and the whole thing ends happily.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

"The Girl I Left Behind Me" is said

The Salt Lake Minstrels, who have given some funny entertainments in times gone by, are preparing to give a revival of aesthetic minstrelsy at the opera house for the benefit of the Young Ladies' Ald society. We have heard that the same dates have been chosen for this entertainment as those on which "Priscilla" will be given at the theatre. We trust this will not prove to be true as a conflict of this kind would be far from seemly. If we recollect aright, a number of the ladies and gentlemen who take leading parts in "Priscilla" have freely given their services on other occasions for the benefit of the Young Ladies' Ald society, and that organization can scarcely lend countenance to competition of this sort. We undersumd that dates are to be had at the opera house both before and after that will Chi G. M. D.; G. M. D.

If all our skies were cheerful skies,
O wouldn't earth be gladdened?
If all our eyes were tearful eyes,
O wouldn't life be saddened?
Life would be sadly saddened?
Our eyes were always tearful.
And earth be gladly gladdened if—
If all our skies were cheerful.

If this and that were thus and so,
O wouldn't it be clever?
But "ifs," my dears, won't make it so,
Though we may "if" forever,
But while it won't our wishes bring,
We'd all be less contented.
And life would be a prosy thing
If "iffing" were prevented.
